House-Senate Conferees Shaping Up New Peacetime Military Training Bill

Draft-UMT Measure Is Polished

Lower Chamber Sees
Little Opposition

WASHINGTON, April 14—House and Senate conferees are ready to prepare for the final congressional action that will give the nation a peacetime military program and the armed services a rich new draft pool of men under 19.

The spokesmen for the two legislative bodies made informal plans for sessions in which they will try to reach a compromise on conflicting House and Senate plans for filling the present military manpower gap and providing a steady source of trained men for the defense emergencies of the future.

The House wants to draft men at 18 and 1-2 and reserve to Congress the right to pass on any Universal Military Training program before it is effected.

On the other hand, the Senate has approved a bill to lower the draft age to 18 and launch a UMT program as soon as the present emergency ends.

The conferees will wrap up the two bills into one piece of legislation and hand it back to the two houses for their approval, following which it goes to the White House.

THE HOUSE PASSED its bill late yesterday 372 to 44 after defeating determined efforts to eliminate UMT from the measure. The Senate passed its bill March 9 by a vote of 79 to 5. House action came after eight days' consideration.

Both bills extend the Selective

NEW YORK, April 14—The Institute of Life Insurance reports that government debt—federal, state and local—has increased more than a quarter of a trillion dollars since 1900.

The institute quoting Census Bureau figures, said that in 1902 total government debt was less than $3.5 billion. It added:

"At the end of the 1950 fiscal year last June, the overall government debt added up to a total of $281 billion and of this the federal share was more than 90 percent."

State Analysis Says City Water Good And Healthy

Circleville city water has been pronounced "of satisfactory sanitary quality" by the state department of health.

The pronouncement was made in a letter addressed to Ervin Leist, city water department manager, from F. H. Waring, chief sanitary engineer of the state health department.

The letter referred to an inspection of the municipal water supply made Feb. 6.

"At that time," the letter stated, "the extension to the infiltration gallery had been completed except for a small amount of backfill. . . In order to insure a safe supply from this extension the rate of chlorination was increased considerably."

"THIS MAY HAVE been responsible in part for complaints of red water in some sections of the city. The additional chlorine may have removed some of the iron which had been deposited in the mains."

"You will note, however, that the enclosed analysis report of samples collected from the pumping station and from the distribution system indicate that the iron content was higher than usual.

"Iron present in the amount of 15 parts per million will generally cause staining of fixtures and laundry."

"The chlorine, which is applied to the large receiving well, oxidizes some of the iron. A small amount of calgon (1 part per million) fed near the high service pump may aid in preventing the oxidation of the remaining iron."

"The physical plant appeared to be well maintained and efficiently operated. The program of improvements upon which the city has embarked is progressing steadily. It is hoped the progress will continue."

"ON THE DAY of the visit, five samples for bacteriological analyses were collected from the distribution system. All were of satisfactory sanitary quality."

The chemical analysis prepared by the state health department showed that city water tapped at the plant contained .8 parts per million of iron, while a tap at the corner of Washington and Main streets showed an iron content of .5 parts per million.

The analysis showed the presence of .3 parts per million of fluoride in city water. This chemical has been given credit for preventing dental cavities when present in sufficient quantity.

"One part per million is usually recommended for proper results," Leist said.

People Jumping Gun About Mac?

CHICAGO, April 14—Sen. Tobey, (R), N. H., believes that the people "are jumping the gun" in denouncing President Truman for firing Gen. MacArthur.

Tobey said the nation "should wait until all the facts are known."

The senator told a news conference in Chicago that the dismissal of MacArthur as commander of UN forces does not mean appeasement. Tobey added:

"Gen. Ridgway also is an able general. He will go on full speed ahead to carry out the plans of the administration."

News Of World In Brief

TOKYO, April 14—Vanguards of three-quarters of a million Communist troops probed for a weak spot in United Nations lines all along the Korean front today in what may be the prelude to their long-expected Spring offensive. Field dispatches said heavily reinforced Chinese and North Korean forces launched powerful counterattacks on the west, central and eastern fronts, but were hurled back with heavy casualties. Dispatches from Eighth Army headquarters said the Reds lost 4,275 men killed or wounded Saturday in comparison with 3,000 for both the two preceding days.

IN KOREA, April 14—Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, the American officer credited with directing the defeat of Communist guerrillas in Greece, took command of the Eighth Army in Korea today. Van Fleet formally took over the Eighth Army from Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway who then flew to Tokyo where he succeeds General MacArthur as UN commander.

WASHINGTON, April 14—The U. S. State Department has rejected a British proposal to eventually turn over Formosa to Communist China and let the Chinese Reds have a voice in the Japanese peace treaty. The department said that the proposal was presented by British Ambassador Sir Oliver Frank in an interview with John Foster

Dulles, U.S. adviser on the Japanese treaty.

NATICK, Mass., April 14—"Aunt" Lydia Stevens will mark her 103rd birthday tomorrow, but it will not be as eventful as previous celebrations. The doctors have forbade "Aunt" Lydia from going aloft in an airplane—her usual birthday custom.

WASHINGTON, April 14—Congress has sent to the White House a compromise authorizing a free $10,000 death insurance policy for all persons in the armed services since the Korean war began. The death benefit would apply to all servicemen killed in action since last June 27. It would be paid to any survivor of the soldier's family.

NEW YORK, April 14—Treasury disbursement officials were red-faced today over an incident in which a 17-year-old youth was sent an income tax refund check in the amount of $300,000. The check, in actual dollars and cents $299,954.50 and representing an overpayment, was sent to Freddy Socozza, a Benjamin Franklin high school junior. Freddy had expected a refund of $45.50.

FHA And GI Housing Loan Interest Rate May Be Given Slight Hike

WASHINGTON, April 14—The government soon may raise interest rates on Federal Housing Administration and GI loans to keep mortgage money flowing into the home building industry.

If the action is taken, the rates may be hiked one-quarter of one percent, meaning buyers will have to make higher payments on loans for new and existing houses.

Government and industry officials report that lenders are switching their investment money away from FHA and veterans home mortgage loans to more acceptable long-term federal bonds.

Industry spokesmen say they are seriously concerned over this development and warn it may have more effect on reducing housing production than real estate credit controls.

Without hard cash to match an FHA or GI loan commitment, they point out, the builder is unable to start a project.

The flight of investment funds started last month after the Federal Reserve Board raised interest rates on the long-term government bonds from 2½ to 2¾ percent.

This tended to make the bonds more attractive although FHA loans carry a 4¼ and veterans 4 percent interest rate. Red tape and special fees cut into the return on the mortgages, lessening their value.

Last Spring, FHA lowered the interest rate one-quarter of one percent to the present level and officials say there is a good chance now that the agency may restore the old rate.

One official says some private lenders have followed the reserve board's lead by raising interest rates and others are expected to take similar action.

These same lenders, however, are continuing to finance non-government home loans since these mortgages carry five to six

ROLLBACK ALSO EXPECTED

Beef Price Ceilings Due To Be Leveled Next Week

WASHINGTON, April 14—Beef gets a price ceiling next week that may be followed by another government order rolling back prices on processed foods and other manufactures.

The news came in Price Stabilizer Michael DiSalle's announcement that he hopes to complete the "basic structure" of his price control program by the end of April, with orders covering not only meats and manufactures but services, wholesalers and imports and exports.

The dollar-and-cent ceilings on beef will control prices from the slaughterer to the butcher shop. DiSalle said yesterday the long-awaited manufacturers' order will be issued "late next week" and will be "largely a rollback regulation."

Regulations covering imports and makers of machinery, cotton textiles, apparel and paper products also will be forthcoming in the near future, the price stabilizer said.

He said regulations for machinery makers, cotton textiles, apparel and paper products would have the same basic formula as the overall manufacturers' order. That is, producers will add increased materials and labor costs to pre-Korean selling prices.

The price stabilizer refused to divulge what recommendations he made for a new Defense Production Act, the current act expires June 30. He also refused to answer a question of whether he favored ceilings on farm parity.

THE MANUFACTURER'S order will permit an estimated 200,000 dollar-and-cent increases in pre-Korea prices to include higher materials and labor costs. Increased overhead costs will not be allowed.

The price chief admitted manufacturers' margins may be squeezed by the regulation.

General To Speak
Before Congress

WASHINGTON, April 14—President Truman talks to the nation about his foreign policy tonight, but is expected to omit criticism of Douglas MacArthur in advance of the general's appearance before Congress next week.

The President, in a sequel to his radio and television explanation of the MacArthur firing Wednesday, goes on the air nationwide again in Washington this evening on the occasion of the annual $100-a-plate Jefferson-Jackson Day Democratic dinner.

Administration sources say the prepared text of Mr. Truman's speech contains no reference to the general.

MacArthur is due to arrive on the East Coast Wednesday—a day after Congress votes on when, and whether, it wants to hear from him in a joint session. The general leaves Tokyo at 5 p. m. (EST) Sunday and will stop enroute in Honolulu and San Francisco.

House Republican Leader Martin, Mass., said the Pacific hero is expected to address the

Brehm's Hearing Due To Start On Monday

Dr. Walter Brehm, congressman from this district, is scheduled to go on trial in Washington federal court Monday.

The Hocking County Republican, who has been free on $1,000 bond, is accused of having accepted "kickbacks" from office employees.

The former Logan dentist, who now calls Millersport home, was to have gone on trial last month, but the hearing was postponed because his attorney was involved in another case.

A federal grand jury indicted the congressman after federal attorneys claimed Brehm took a total of $1,380 in "political contributions" from Mrs. Clara Soliday and Mrs. Emma S. Craven who worked in his office in 1947 and 1948.

The accusations were originated by Columnist Drew Pearson just prior to last November's election. Brehm, however, was reelected by a substantial majority over his Democrat opponent, Mell Underwood Jr.

Maine 'Senator' Really Wows 'Em In Ohio Assembly

LANCASTER, April 14—When "Senator Paul Snow of Maine" appeared before the Ohio Legislature, he wowed them.

He posed with the State Treasurer Tracy for pictures last Tuesday, then toured the capital building in Columbus. That night he dined with the Republican state chairman and later—with some of the younger legislators—he toured Columbus nightclubs.

On Wednesday he sat in on a meeting of the senate taxation committee, addressed the state house, spoke again before the senate, and had the solons charmed and delighted.

Yesterday he was identified as an escaped mental patient and today he is on his way back to the Veterans Administration Hospital near Chillicothe from which he fled last Monday.

joint session "Thursday or Friday—more likely Friday."

HE MADE IT plain that MacArthur supporters will reject any plan for his appearance that does not give the speech the prestige of being delivered in the House chamber.

The President's apparent determination to avoid recriminations in the MacArthur affair was shown in his announcement that he was "happy" to learn Congress would invite the general to speak at a joint meeting. Mr. Truman said it was "fitting that Congress bestow this honor on one of our great military men."

Secretary of State Acheson, meanwhile, announced that he will deliver a "major foreign policy address," next Wednesday at a dinner given by the Women's National Press Club of Washington.

The ousting of MacArthur, which critics credit largely to Acheson's policies, drew a blast from Martin last night as a "black page in American history."

The speaker of the House in the 80th Congress accused the administration in a countrywide radio broadcast of "bare-faced deception" by voicing hope for a negotiated peace with the Chinese Communists. He charged that "appeasement of Communism in Asia is again the watchword."

There is every indication that a GOP-sponsored invitation for MacArthur to address Congress will pass overwhelmingly when it is called up Tuesday in both houses.

RANKING DEMOCRATS predicted it probably would be adopted unanimously in view of Speaker Rayburn's endorsement of it and the President's own sanction.

Both houses of Congress scheduled the MacArthur voting for Tuesday so they would be free to attend Monday's opening of the American League baseball season in Washington. President Truman will throw out the first ball in accord with custom.

MacArthur already has disclosed his willingness to appear at a joint meeting. But the Senate Armed Services Committee is expecting a reply today to an invitation to testify in its probe of military policy in the Far East.

Sen. Bridges, (R) N. H., voiced sentiment in both parties in urging a "hell to breakfast" investigation of U.S. plans to defeat Communism, including the MacArthur removal.

Chairman Connally, (D) Tex., said he had no plan at present to invite MacArthur to appear before his foreign relations committee. But it was understood that Connally would not oppose a request for such action by his committee members.

Sen. Kerr, (D) Okla., who hotly attacked MacArthur in a Senate speech earlier this week, suggested that the Armed Services Committee sponsor MacArthur's House-Senate appearance. Otherwise, he said, the session would provide a "sanctuary" for the general to escape questioning.

3 Boys Facing Judge's Wrath

Three boys ranging in age from 14 to 16 years face the wrath of Pickaway County Juvenile Judge George D. Young in the near future.

The boys will be given a stern explanation of the difference between right and wrong, with emphasis on the fact that it is wrong to break into a school house and take money and candy.

The youngsters were apprehended by Pickaway County Deputy Sheriff Walters Richards when they broke into Salt Creek Township school at 6:30 p. m. Thursday.

Remington-Rand Has Berth Ready For MacArthur

FORT MYERS, Fla., April 14 —James H. Rand, president of Remington-Rand, Inc., announced last night that General MacArthur will join his firm as an executive officer within 90 days.

Rand, aboard his yacht, The Galaxy, moored in the Fort Myers yacht basin, said the 71-year-old MacArthur probably will make his home in Connecticut where the concern's main offices are located.

Asked about a news story that Remington-Rand had offered the former United Nations commander a $100,000 a year position, Rand said:

"It is correct that General MacArthur will be elected to the board of Remington-Rand and assume an active part in its worldwide affairs within the next 90 days.

"I expect to confer with the general within a few weeks in New York and Washington, at which time details will be discussed and worked out.

"I understand the general would prefer to make his home in Connecticut and that he has for a long time looked forward to giving his son an opportunity to attend an American school, which heretofore has been impossible."

The general's son, Arthur, is 13. The general is scheduled to arrive in San Francisco by plane late Monday afternoon. MacArthur now draws Army pay of $18,761, which he would continue to receive if he entered private industry.

percent, yielding a greater return than federal bonds.

There are equally strong arguments in favor and against a rate hike.

Whether the Veterans Administration would take such action is a matter of question, since it must give ex-servicemen preferential treatment on loans. VA has resisted a rate hike in the past.

Officials also point out that FHA may decide against the move to keep its operations low and thereby effect a further curtailment in housing output.

Some government housing experts are talking of the possibility that the production goal of 850,000 new houses and apartments set for 1951 may be extended to cover next year's output.

Barring war, officials think such a program would fill the needs of the nation during the emergency until production could be raised to desired levels.

There has been no decision, however, on 1952's goal since officials are more concerned over the present production rate.

In this connection, Housing Administrator Raymond M. Foley says there is no plan to reduce the current goal despite indications that home building this year will exceed 850,000 units.

last night and refused to say another word.

He was full of wit and wisdom, however, when he turned up in Columbus Tuesday and identified himself as "Republican State Senator Snow of Portland, Me."

SNOW GOT the pluck treatment usually accorded visiting dignitaries, and handled his role so well that one senator—Republican Ralph A. Winter—later remarked:

"He does a lot better job than a lot of sane individuals." Snow's politics were his undoing. GOP Publicity Director John Adven became suspicious because the "senator" had criticized the Democrats in his speeches—whereas visiting officials usually steer clear of politics. A checkup disclosed his identity and Snow was seized in Lancaster.

The political comments included this one from the speech before the house:

"Maine potatoes are hard to mash because the Department of Agriculture made us dump 90 million bushels in a ravine on a Canadian border in 1949.

"They paid us $2 a bushel to do it. As fast as we dumped them, the Canadians loaded them up, resacked them and sold 'em back to the U. S. for $6 a bushel. That's why they don't mash so well—they cost too much."

Even the Democrats laughed.

The House bill also extends the term of military service from 21 months to 26 months, the Senate to 24 months.

In addition, it provides for four months' basic training for all inductees and bars assignment of men under 19.

Both bills provide that inducted men shall serve six years in the armed forces and the reserves.

The measure also provides for deferment of college students and permits high school pupils to graduate before they are inducted.

Provision is made under the House measure for a lowering of physical and mental standards for acceptability to permit the induction of more 4-Fs. Aliens who are permanent U. S. residents would also be liable for induction.

Ancient Relics Help Modern Metal Studies

CLEVELAND, April 14 — Ohio State University Professor Earle R. Caley believes that rusty metal relics of ancient Greece and Rome are helping modern chemists combat the $9 million a year loss caused by corrosion.

Dr. Caley spoke on "Modern Chemistry and Ancient Chemical Technology" at the 119th national meeting of the American Chemical Society held here.

He pointed out that samples of ancient metals and alloys have shown that the ancients "produced metals of a purity that compares favorably with that of the purest metals commercially produced today."

Chemists are becoming increasingly interested in the field of chemical archeology, Dr. Caley said, and the application of modern methods of analysis is yielding results of practical value.

"Some of the important alloys used today were first made and widely used in ancient times—for example, bronze, brass, pewter, solders and mild steels. . . . ancient soda-lime glass was similar in composition to ordinary modern glass," Dr. Caley said.

Final Practice Underway For Club Minstrel

Final polishing phases now are in vogue as members of Circleville Kiwanis Club prepare for their annual minstrel show.

End men, chorus members, orchestra members, and special soloists who are to participate in the show next Thursday and Friday nights are giving those last bits of brushing-up to jokes, songs, dances, tambourine shakes, and instrumental novelties.

Scenery and costumes are being readied, long unused instruments are being dusted, and rusty jokes are getting unaccustomed exercise in familiar southern shuffles.

Director Truman Eberly and Dramatic Coach Mrs. Clark Will report that the minstrel will be different this year with the addition of several instrumental novelties. Ukelele, banjo, guitar, harmonica, violin and ocarina tones will ring out in Circleville high school auditorium.

Time of performance is set for 8 o'clock each night with a show of about two hours in prospect.

Kiwanians are emphasizing in their ticket sales promotion the fact that much of the profit from the annual minstrel goes to sponsor the Summer program for Circleville youth at Ted Lewis Park. It is hoped that the Summer park program may be expanded even more this year than in former years.

Tickets may be purchased from any Kiwanian or may be secured at the following stores—Gallagher's, Isly's, Hamilton's, Croman's Feed Store, Goodrich Store, Steele's Produce and Richards Implement.

Zachariah Chosen For Sermon Topic

"Reflecting The Image of God" is the subject chosen by the Rev. Donald Mitchell for the 10:30 a. m. preaching service Sunday morning in Presbyterian church.

This message will develop "the word of the Lord" in Zachariah 4:6, saying, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."

The choir will sing "The Altar of Prayer," Mrs. Clark Will directing; Mrs. Theodore Huston at the organ.

Congregational singing will include the hymns: "Praise the Lord, Ye Heavens, Praise Ye the Lord," and "Begin—Some Heavenly Theme."

Church's Tie To Point 4 To Be Aired In Confab

NEW YORK, April 14—Leading church men and mission board executives will meet with United Nations and State Department officials to lay the ground work for a realistic church strategy in underdeveloped areas and to iron out relations between church agencies and government Point Four programs at a conference to be held at Buck Hill Falls Inn, April 24 to 26.

The gathering is convened under the auspices of the Department of International Justice and Goodwill and the Division of Foreign Missions of the National Council of Churches. It is the first church sponsored gathering devoted entirely to the church's relation to programs of technical assistance sponsored by the government.

Dr. Walter W. Van Kirk, executive director of the Department of International Justice and Goodwill, in announcing the conference said that while church bodies have generally endorsed the objectives of Point Four, "there is some concern on the part of church leaders that the program might be used primarily as a means of mustering votes for our side in the cold war."

The conference, he said, was being called to help the churches develop a policy in relation to such crucial issues as church-state relations, release of missionary personnel for government service, and the type of support the Church can give to legislative measures connected with Point Four.

Other issues to be considered, he said, will include the moral and spiritual basis of technical assistance, the effect of government sponsored programs on missions and the relation of U. S. and UN programs.

The Rev. William Scarlett, Protestant Episcopal bishop of the diocese of Missouri, will serve as a chairman of the conference, which is expected to be attended by more than 100 leading church men, educators, State Department and United Nations officials.

Nelson Rockefeller, chairman of the International Development Advisory Board to the President; Dr. John C. Bennett, professor of Christian theology, Union Theological Seminary, New York; Arthur Fletcher, information specialist, United Nations, Technical Assistance Administration; and Samuel P. Hayes Jr., director, program planning and advisory, staff Technical Cooperation Administration, Department of State, will be the principal speakers.

Four major topics have been selected by the group for discussion and action. These include: (1) the needs and aspirations of peoples in underdeveloped areas; (2) the guiding principles for the churches in economic and social development; (3) the relation of the churches to the making of public policy; and (4) implications of the technical assistance programs for the life work of the churches.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Genesis 12-17.

God told Abram to move from Haran to Canaan. Lot, Abram's nephew, went with him, but his possessions were so great that the land would not support both, so Abram gave Lot his choice, and Lot chose the plain of Jordan.

After twelve years, the people of the city of Sodom rebelled against five conquering kings. In the ensuing battle Lot was made prisoner. Abram organized his servants, engaged the kings in conflict and rescued Lot and his goods.

Famine drove Abram and his family to Egypt. Fearing that his wife's beauty would cause his own death, Abram told her to say she was his sister. The deception was discovered, and Abram was severely rebuked by the Pharaoh.

Abram and Sara had no children, but Abram had a son by Hagar, a handmaid. Sara sent the woman and child away, and they would have died if an angel had not aided them.

PEACE WITH JAPAN

MANY a peace treaty has shut the door on a past war only to open another leading inevitably to a future conflict. Victors have performed ruthless operations on the territory of the vanquished.

They have imposed terms designed to insure permanent weakness and poverty for their defeated enemies. They have demanded reparations that could not possibly be paid. In such soil the seeds of a new war were certain to grow—and did.

That is why the peace treaty the United States is now writing for Japan aims at avoiding such mistakes. Japan would be confined to her home islands, but she would be sovereign and free. She would contribute to collective security though she would not be allowed to become a threat.

Japan would no longer get economic help from this country, but she would be restored to a position of equality in world commerce.

Such a peace will not recommend itself to some of the nations that took part in the struggle against Japan. The Philippines, for example, want to put in a claim for $8 billion to cover the damage done by the invasion. Australia is not too happy over the thought of a Japan even modestly rearmend.

If Japan is given an opportunity to rehabilitate herself, then perhaps the past will die, is the reasoning back of the proposed peace treaty. It may or may not turn out that way.

THE DISPLACED

MEMBERS of the United States Displaced Persons Commission are surveying colonies of Germans expelled from behind the iron curtain with the intention of encouraging their emigration to America if they have skills. Approximately 44,000 Germans are involved—farmers, craftsmen, scientists.

The United States can use these, of course, during the period when manpower will be short on account of rearmament. Many of them would make good citizens. But after the rearmament emergency is over and there is less demand for skilled manpower, they cannot be employed in America without extraordinary exertions, probably in the form of pump-priming public works.

No nation in history has done a tenth as much as this country to help the unfortunate and the oppressed and the hungry. In addition, it has become the permanent haven of millions. But it is to be doubted if anything could be gained by moving the entire population of the globe to this land of the free.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Fred Smith has sent out a notice of the American Assembly, which is to be held under the auspices of the graduate school of business of Columbia university in May, depending upon General Eisenhower's European commitments. Smith, be it noted, was one of the public relations counsel of Wendell Willkie during his presidential campaign.

The purpose of the American Assembly is "to discuss and clarify vital national issues," which is laudable, and the subject of the first assembly will be "the relationship of the United States to Western Europe," which, of course, has been considered in the "Great Debate" and Congress is now legislating on matters pertaining to it. By May, much of this legislation shall have been passed and the obligations shall have been set. However, there can be no harm in either discussion or clarification, particularly the latter.

The press release for "The First Assembly," as the May meeting is to be called, states:

"The prime objective of this assembly is to state and clarify as much as possible the many interrelated questions involved in what we are to do about Western Europe—how far we should go toward protecting Western Europe from Communism, the importance of Western Europe to us, and the price we might have to pay for various methods of meeting the situation. If some of the conflicts of opinion on this subject can be resolved, the assembly will have made an important contribution.

I do not think that this goes far enough. I should like to see a discussion on how we got into our present troubles, who got us there, what foundations were laid for them at Teheran, Yalta, and Potsdam. Every public situation that faces us today has its roots in the past.

For it seems to me that nobody can discuss with any intelligence the status of our relations to Western Europe or to Communism in May, 1951 without a full grasp of the agreements, stipulations and promises, written and verbal, which underlie our present difficulties with Soviet Russia.

For instance, we need to know why when we could have taken Berlin as an American prize, we did not. Why did we delay until the Russians could come up? Why did we establish a tri-partite city with no exit or entrance from and to the American zone except through the Russian zone? When we understand the errors we have made, it will be possible for us to assess the full criminality of Russia's action in hurling the world into war again. What is the basis for all the confusion in Korea?

Then the circular says about "The First Assembly:"

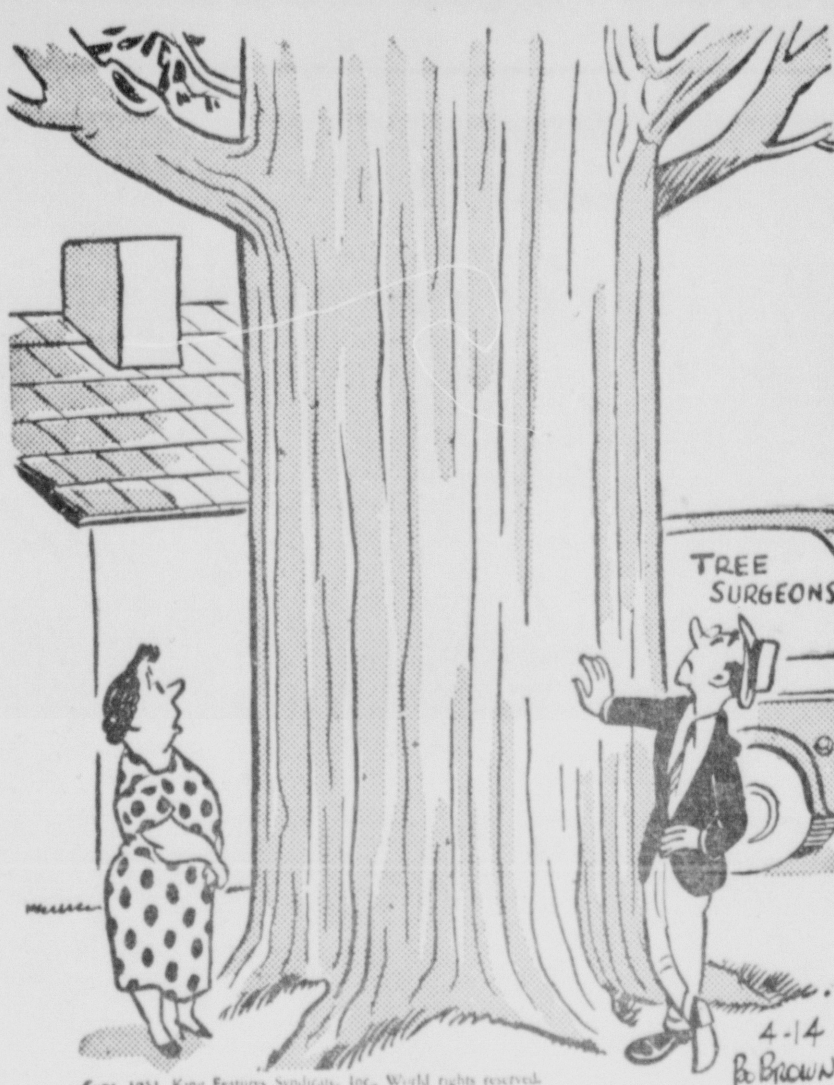

"It will not be the function of the American Assembly to set fourth (sic) a specific way to dispose of this issue, but rather to provide a thorough discussion of all the problems involved, get all the facts before the people, and thereby make it possible for the citizen to exercise his own judgment."

Penicillin Found More Potent When Combined With Iodine

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

ONCE a drug is discovered and proved useful, efforts are made to increase its effectiveness in every possible way. This has happened with penicillin, used so widely in the treatment of infections. Recently, for instance, it has been found that when used in connection with iodine, penicillin is four to five times as potent as when used alone. This means that some infections can be overcome with doses of penicillin only one-fourth or one-fifth as large as would ordinarily be required. If it is given along with an iodine salt, such as potassium iodide.

We do not exactly understand how the iodine acts to get its booster effect, but it has been suggested that it makes the germ-wall more open to the action of penicillin.

Treated With Penicillin

A group of patients with venereal and skin diseases was treated with penicillin and iodine salts by a number of physicians who were particularly interested in this problem. They found that the combination brought about a greater percentage of cures than did the penicillin alone, though results are affected by the activity of the thyroid gland, the age and the nutrition of the patient. Younger patients did not respond to the combined treatment as well as did the older ones.

In carrying out the treatment, potassium iodide was given in milk from 1/2 to 1 1/2 hours before the penicillin was administered. In some cases, certain of the iodine salts, together with the penicillin, were injected into a muscle. The doses of penicillin used varied from 10,000 to 30,000 units. With penicillin alone, 300,000 units are usually employed.

Iodine Treatment

Good results were achieved with the combined iodine and penicillin treatment in cases of boils and in certain fungus infections. In carrying out the treatment in some cases, the iodine was given over a period of several days before the penicillin was started. It was found that when this was done, smaller doses of the penicillin brought about a cure of the infections. It seems that this form of treatment was effective in both gonorrhea and syphilis.

Reactions to the penicillin also occurred much less frequently when this method was employed than when the penicillin was used alone in larger doses. The reactions which often occur consist of skin rash and sometimes fever.

Iodine should not be used if the patient has a tuberculous infection in addition to the other condition to be treated.

It would appear that this method of treatment should receive further investigation to determine its exact usefulness.

E. B. W.: What makes my eyes feel tired all the time? I am in my early forties, and wear glasses.

Answer: It is not clear just what is causing this difficulty. An examination of your eyes would be advisable since it is possible that you may need new glasses. Disturbances of the general health may manifest themselves in a feeling of tiredness of the eyes.

River's Rim

by Jane Abbott

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

THERE came no word of any crossing, along the river, following the bombardment. The next day a strange quiet hung over the opposite shore as if all life there suddenly had ceased. The river flowed, blue as the sky, between the shores.

The Gazette printed a long story, a few days later. "Assault on Our Shores from Fort Erie Gallantly Repulsed," ran the heading. Defeated in it, the enemy, before abandoning the fort and retreating inland, had blown up their magazine. "The strength of our defense has achieved peace for us," stated Ollie Kane.

Quint threw the newssheet down with a sound of deep disgust. A great triumph! One gun had been fired from the American side of the river. Peace, maybe, because for some strategic reason the British forces were withdrawing from the river. But peace would not be in him—he had been shaken in those convictions he had clung to so stubbornly.

For all the terror she had shown, Becky was the only light-hearted one in the household. Michael Duffy, the young drover, had told her he was coming back in two weeks or so, she confided to Jennet, her cheeks very red as she whispered it. "He's got enough saved to marry on, he said. He wants to settle, somewhere... He's nice-spoken!"

Jennet was startled at the distinct pang of envy she felt.

"You're silly—you don't know him," she protested. "And there is Erron Piers..."

"Erron Piers! You're the one who is silly," countered the younger girl with a spirit acquired on the instant. "You're the one he comes here to see!"

Jennet made no answer for the reason that, since the hours in the woods, against her will she was feeling sorry for Erron. And he had risked his life to get Aladdin to safe shelter—she must be kind to him. She was as shaken in her feelings as was Quint.

Some days later Ollie Kane, making a reckless incursion in his stock of precious paper, brought out an extra edition of the Gazette. Big type told that the long-planned invasion of Canada through Lake Champlain was under way, a strong force already on the march toward Montreal; bigger type that the enemy troops had been withdrawn from along the Canadian shore of the river to join Brigadier General John Vincent at Burlington Heights and proceed from there to the defense of York and Montreal.

"We on the frontier may now return to our peacetime affairs and occupations..."

There was some mockery in this where Quint was concerned. He could not return to his plans of enterprise. He did not let himself think of them. And his work around the tavern had at no time been interrupted.

"Aunt Rhoda can cross the river safely now, Uncle Quint," said Jennet after she had read the sheet. "Can't we plant some flower seeds so they'll be growing when she comes?"

Quint gave her a startled look. He had not thought of that. He was not letting himself think of Rhoda, either. Of how he would feel toward her, if she did come back.

"Put in some seeds if you like—I'll turn the ground. But I doubt, after enjoying my brother's way of living, she'll return to this." He spoke with bitterness. Rhoda's going to Alec was a great part of the sense of defeat that had grown in him.

Jennet began to work in Rhoda's garden, and while she worked she rehearsed to herself what she would say to Erron Piers when they next met. It must be kind and at the same time discouraging to any ideas he might have of courting her.

But Erron did not come. It was more than a week now since that night in the woods and he had not come, a fact which gave Jennet great annoyance.

Then, one day, she was out by the sheds and she heard him shout to her from the beach. He was running.

"Miss Jennet, they're hauling all the craft from the yard, up the river... They'll be along right soon... you can see 'em..."

"The brig?" asked Jennet, as breathless as he.

"Aye. She's the beauty of the fleet. Where's Quint? They'll need more hands along here where the current's swifter..." He was running toward the house as he spoke, and Jennet was running beside him.

Erron was not the only runner to spread the news. Men were by Jane Abbott. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

coming from every direction to gather at the landing. Some came from the Buffalo village on horseback. The same story was on every tongue. Captain Oliver Hazard Perry was taking advantage of the abandonment of the fort across the river to move the ships from the yard at Saajagunda Creek to Presquille, where he was assembling a big fleet. Four oarsmen had secretly rowed him over the lake from Erie a few nights before.

The ships appeared in sight—a curious spectacle, for they were being hauled from the shore by oxen and horses and seamen who would man them when they got into the smoother lake waters. First came the prize ship that had been captured from the British the year before, then two small schooners, some of Alton's Durham boats and last the brig.

A loud shouting lifted. Jennet's throat hurt as if she had shouted, too, though she wasn't sure it wasn't a sob. "Oh, she's so beautiful! But, Erron—" She caught at his arm. "The pennant!"

"I hid it in a corner of the fo'c'sle cabin." He spoke low, close to her ear. Then he shook off her hand. "I'll take a hawser and haul..."

"Erron, let me..." She knew then it was a sob in her throat. Because she could not take a hawser and haul, along with Erron and those others.

The men on the bank scrambled down to river level to give a hand, if help were needed. All but Quint—he did not move. Jennet saw him standing alone, his eyes on the brig, and a look on his face she never had seen there before—of irrevocable loss.

She went to him. "Uncle Quint—she'll come back! The brig, I mean."

He was angry because he had betrayed what he was feeling. He spoke harshly. "What do you know of it? Do you claim powers of foresight, such as Mistress Sabrina's?"

"I dare hope!" she retorted. But she would not tell him that the little pennant was still aboard the brig. He would laugh at her.

"Hope..." He looked down at her, almost contemptuously. "Yes, you can—you're young!" Then he swung around and stalked back to the tavern. Jennet's eyes, following him, were deeply troubled.

NEW YORK—The senatorial crime-investigating gypsies have broken camp and moved on from this hotbed of vice, but the echoes of their videoed thunder remain. Housewives accustomed to watching Virginia Hill, the Belle Watling of her time, find themselves dissatisfied with soap operas in the mornings now; their lives suddenly are empty. Baseball and crime and politics are back on the front pages, but the names on people's lips here in the big town still are Kefauver, O'Dwyer, Tobey, Halley and Anastasia.

They tell me, although the W. C. T. U. may differ, that the way to find a good cross-section of the public is to visit a bar and grill. So I did. I drifted into an East 45th street saloon near Second avenue on the first morning that our ambassador to Mexico made his appearance as a television star. This was a workingman's-type saloon and the men sitting around in the cool morning nursing their beers were overalled, capped and piped. Mr. O'Dwyer was well into his act when I walked in, and the men were leaning on their elbows on the bar, apparently deeply interested. It was only when I looked more closely that I saw one was reading a racing chart, wet with beerglass circles, and another was dozing. There was a great quiet in the bar.

"Look at him," one of them finally said. "The dumb ——" His bar-mate raised a shaggy eyebrow.

"A fine thing to say," he said. "You should have respect for a diplomat."

"A diplomat is a politician," the first one said. "Tell me I should respect a politician. Go on, tell me."

"A couple of nams," he said. "They're both trying to be Bill Fallon. Why don't they stick to the facts?"

"What facts?" a man named Connolly said. "They're running this thing on facts from gossip columns. Only guy could tell anything is Frank Costello. You think he's gonna tell anything?"

"Maybe," another guy said. "They're threatening him with deportation."

"I give you eight to one you never hear no more of that deportation," Connolly said. Mr. Halley, the committee's chief counsel, took over the questioning of O'Dwyer. The barflies gave him a little more attention. He was calm, cool and evidently intelligent.

"A smart guy, that Halley," a guy said.

"Only by comparison," another said.

"This reminds me of the Lindberg trial over in New Jersey," Connolly's friend said. "A regular circus. It's a disgrace to have this thing on that darn machine up there. No dignity."

"You watch it, don't you?" Connolly demanded.

"Ain't missed it yet," his friend said.

O'DWYER WAS BEGINNING to redder and wilt under the barrage, and it was obvious that if they cleared the court he would have climbed over the desk and taken a poke at Tobey. The action was absorbing, but neither of them said anything startling; there were no surprising facts uncovered.

"I see the Red Sox finally winning the AL pennant this year," a guy said. "That is what I see."

"Shaddup," a guy said. "Waddya talking baseball for, when something really important is up on the screen there?"

"Tell me one thing anyone said that's important," the first guy said. "Virginia Hill said she bet the horses," somebody offered. The first guy shook his head.

"An' so do I," he said.

"She's prettier," the somebody said.

One guy got philosophical. "Do you think all this will amount to anything?" he asked. "I mean, do you think they're going to clean up crime and like all that?" Everybody laughed, and for a moment you couldn't hear O'Dwyer up on the screen; you could only see him smiting his breast.

"Yeah," somebody replied. "They're going to clean up crime. The day hens lay purple eggs. Just hold your breath."

O'Dwyer asked for a recess to compose himself, and I drank my beer and went out into the sunlight in 45th street. A man I knew hurried past and I asked where he was going in such a hurry.

"I got a good thing in the first at Lincoln Downs," he said. "I got to see my bookie and get down. Today's the day."

Judy Canova tells of the hill-billy whose son went to high school—the highest rung of the educational ladder ever achieved by a member of the family. "I'm proud of you, boy," drawled the father. "Now what do you mean to do when you graduate?" "Paw," said the son, "I'm reckoning to become a doctor. I'm a-going to study obstetrics." "I'd say you'd be awastin' your time," opined the father, "because no sooner will you learn about those stetics when some smart guy from up North will come along with a cure for them."

The Fitz-U-Rite Clothing Company had to close its doors when the First National Bank refused a fifth extension on its loan. Explained the company's proprietory glumly, "I asked that banker for another extension on the strength of my character—but he refused it on the strength of his."

An exhibit depicting the purpose of the various clubs will be held with each club in charge of arrangements of its individual exhibit.

An elaborate program is being arranged with Mrs. J. P. Moffitt as general chairman of the event. Members of her committee are Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker, Miss Mary Heffner and Mrs. Oscar Root.

Assisting the general committee will be social aides chosen from the various clubs. They are: Mrs. E. W. Hedges, Mrs. R. R. Bales, Mrs. James Reichelderfer, Mrs. J. M. Hedges, Mrs. Blanche Y. Motschman, Mrs. Clifford Beaver, Mrs. Lloyd Jones and Mrs. George Dearborn.

Each club will appoint a committee to arrange its exhibit. Also functioning in each organization will be other members assisting with arrangements for the entire occasion.

Decorations for the affair will be arranged by Pickaway Garden Club and music will be furnished by Monday Club. Members of the Daughters of American Revolution will serve as a reception committee.

Refreshments will be dispensed by Pickaway County Medical Society Auxiliary and arrangements of exhibits will be directed by Business and Professional Women's Club.

An elaborate style show is being arranged by the Junior Women's Club showing Spring and Summer fashions from local business houses handling women's apparel.

The finale for the evening will be a style show of the flapper era staged by Child Conservation League. Models for the style reviews will all be members of the various clubs.

The entire production will be free of any charge except for a fee which guests may wish to give to the refreshment booth.

Mrs. Clark Will, president of Pickaway County Association of Women's Clubs, stated:

"Every effort is being made to make this event the largest social meeting ever arranged in Circleville. We hope to make it one of outstanding note that will appeal to every woman in the association."

Garden Club Hears Talks On Flowers

Talks on the planting and culture of flowers were heard by members of Ashville Garden Club when they met Thursday evening in Community Hall.

Mrs. Glen Klopfenstein was in charge of the program and presented the speakers.

Richard Hedges talked on "How to Get Roses to Grow," starting with the selection of a plant and pointing out that attention should be given to the stalk and roots. He also gave pointers on planting and pest control of roses using a live rose bush to illustrate his remarks.

Ira Hoover discussed, "How to Get Peonies to Grow," saying that "he never uses a spray of any kind and never uses fertilizer—that to fertilize will cause the stems to grow too tall and thin to support the blooms."

He said, "The first year is the only time that a plant needs protection in winter." Hoover has 48 varieties of peonies in his garden. Mrs. George McDowell spoke on, "What to do In April."

President, Mrs. C. E. Mahaffey, conducted a short business session and announced that Mrs. Isaac Millar, Mrs. S. F. Hinkle and Mrs. J. Arthur Stark are on the program committee for the next meeting May 10.

Fingerpainting Outline Is Given By County Aide

Painting and drawing are activities that have a strong appeal for children and can occupy the time on damp gloomy days. This is one way in which they may express themselves and their feelings, as well as experiment in creating something that is their own.

Fingerpainting has an almost universal appeal, since it is enjoyed by all ages from the tiniest toddler to the oldest adult.

Many activities for the child require the use of one hand more than the other, as in paper cutting, crayon work or painting with a brush. Fingerpainting is relaxing to the child because he uses both hands in full free sweeps of arm and shoulder muscles.

A flat washable surface is needed for fingerpainting. The surface should be low enough so that while standing the child can place his hands flat on the top of it without having to stoop or bend over. A smock or coverall apron that completely covers the child will protect his clothing.

Paper for fingerpainting needs to be glazed on one side at least. Heavy glazed shelf paper or butcher paper is satisfactory.

Homemade finger paint is inexpensive and easily made. It will not keep as long as commercial paint, so must be discarded after a time, and a fresh supply made up. Here is a recipe as provided by Miss Genevieve Alley, Pickaway County home demonstration agent:

1-2 C. Limit Starch
1 1-3 C. boiling water
1-2 C. soap flakes
1 T. glycerine (mineral oil may be substituted)
Paint — Vegetable coloring, showcard or poster paint
Mix starch with enough cold water to make smooth paste. Add boiling water, cook until glossy, remove from fire, stir in dry soap flakes. When cool, add glycerine. Divide and color with paint. Pour into jars.

The paint may be placed in small jars or other containers, and these set in a rack to keep

Mrs. Jack Ullman was presented with a gift for her new baby, Jackie Lee.

The hostess invited her guests to the dining room where they were served a salad course from the table which was centered with an arrangement of roses.

On Wednesday evening, at the close of Child Advancement Club meeting held in the home of Mrs. Donald Woodward on West Ohio street, Berger Hospital Guild 17 held a business session and elected officers.

Mrs. Neil Morris of Kingston Route 1 was hostess to Berger Hospital Guild 29 Thursday evening in her home.

TELEPHONE TOPICS

Do you know that you can save time by placing long distance calls in the correct manner?

For example, when the operator answers:

FIRST—give her the name of the distant city and state. (She will start her search for an idle circuit before she knows any other details).

THEN—give her the desired telephone number (and name of persons if person to person).

If you do not know the number, give the operator the name and address so she can get the number for you.

WAIT—until the operator asks for your telephone number.

AVOID—the rush hours and get faster service.

Easy enough, isn't it?

A Florida newspaper has pulled a unique punishment on users of a party-line telephone who refused to interrupt their conversation long enough to allow another party to call the fire department.

The local newspaper posted the names of the alleged offenders in its office and, in the news story describing the burning of the home involved, invited all and sundry of its readers to come by the office and read the names of the party-line users.

This newspaper stated that the individual who was attempting to report the fire was entirely unsuccessful in all efforts to plead with the talkers to give up the line for just a minute.

This is indeed a sad commentary on the vagaries of human nature.

Mantle Pays Price For Fame

He Sees Public Pry Into Life

NEW YORK, April 14—Mickey Mantle, the highly-touted 19-year-old rookie of the New York Yankees, undoubtedly has a lot to learn about big league baseball, but he is getting one quick lesson the hard way.

Mantle, the boy who is being groomed as Joe DiMaggio's successor, has been learning this week that the sudden fame and fortune of the big leagues carries with it a high price.

Star athletes can have no private life. Their salaries, their affairs of the heart, their after-hours escapades are all accepted by the fans who pay the freight at the ball parks as common property.

Some players, such as Ted Williams, never quite adjust themselves to this sometimes ruthless invasion of their privacy. Others glory in the spotlight and "showboat" their way through their careers. Others strike a sort of uneasy truce, tolerating the fame and the publicity, but not going out of their way to court it.

IN MANTLE'S CASE, he hit the Yankee camp an obscure minor leaguer with only one season of Class C ball behind him. A great natural hitter, they said, but at least a year away from the majors.

However, he showed so much ability—looked so spectacular surrounded by a supporting cast of fading Yankee veterans—that he inspired more rapturous words than anybody else in camp.

Then Mantle's troubles began. Although the matter hadn't been mentioned a great deal at that time, the youth was classified 4-F by his draft board because of a bone infection in his left leg incurred when he was kicked in a football scrimmage in high school.

"How can he play baseball and run and slide if he's not fit for the Army?" a lot of folks wondered.

Next thing anybody knew, Mantle was called back for another examination, reportedly because of poison pen letters received by draft authorities. Mantle said he was perfectly willing to go into the Army if found acceptable, but again he was declared 4-F.

Mantle's case is nothing new. During World War II, such stars as DiMaggio, Williams, Bob Feller and a great many others were inducted and served their country well. Others, like Lou Boudreau and Hal Newhouse were deferred for physical reasons.

NOBODY COULD say that wartime ball players were unpatriotic. They were willing to go into service, but they were not wanted.

In the present emergency, however, there is an accentuated hue and cry to sweep everyone into uniform in some capacity or another if they happen to be of draft age. The reasoning is that even a 4-F can work as a clerk or a cook in a headquarters far from the combat zone.

While this probably is true, the armed forces are wary of taking anyone whose physical condition may later become a liability. Should a physical defect become aggravated, a boy might spend a prolonged period in a hospital using facilities and requiring attention desperately needed for wounded combat soldiers.

But aside from all that, young Mickey Mantle has had a rather embarrassing and unpleasant —

Slab Of Ice Due For Freezing On Coliseum Floor

First ice show ever staged in Pickaway County is scheduled for the fairgrounds coliseum Saturday evening, April 28, and the following afternoon.

It is called "Icelandia" and is the only completely self-contained show of its kind on the road. Because of its unusual setup, Icelandia may prove to be just as interesting in its preparations as it is in actual production.

John Heiskell, county fair board secretary who booked the show, reported that the ice rink will be set up on the coliseum's basketball floor. Varied layers of canvas and insulation material will separate the slab of ice from the floor.

Icelandia has its own portable ice rink, a 30x40 foot floor, complete with its own compressors, brine coolers, 24-ton trailer and tractor, stage settings and personnel.

The musical funfest on ice is thus able to reach communities never before visited by shows of its kind. Even the cooling system, composed of miles of pipe is carried along with the assorted equipment necessary for a production like Icelandia. Full freezing time is about 18 hours.

Included in the 30-member cast is Mae Edwards, said to be one of the most versatile silver blade interpreters in the business; Buff McCusker, one of America's leading male skaters and Sonja Henie's skating partner in the ice film, "Winter-time;" Dot McCusker, leading comedienne of ice-dance fame and skating star of "Ice Capades;" Chuck Rolland, said to get more elevation from his skates than any other "jumper," and Joanie McCusker, formerly of "Ice Follies" fame.

He Is Not Yet 30, But Majors Shun Temperamental Wakefield

CHICAGO, April 14—He is not yet 30 years old and almost everyone agrees that he has real talent, but not one major league baseball club seems to want Dick Wakefield.

Just a short time ago, however, a dozen teams would have given a great deal to get him. Detroit handed Wakefield $52,000 as a bonus or signing contract when he was still at the University of Michigan. But it's a different story now.

Vice-President Jim Gallagher of the Chicago Cubs explained that the "word has gotten around." He said: "Baseball clubs dread a troublemaker. One such player can wreck an entire club. The teams are afraid to gamble on Wakefield."

"His refusal to report to the Chicago White Sox last year after being traded by the New York Yankees was his downfall."

The one-time American League batting champion had demanded that the Yanks pay him $22,500, the same salary he received from Detroit in 1949.

THE YANKS wanted him to take a $5,000 salary cut since he had batted only .206 with the Tigers.

Wakefield was peddled to the White Sox without performing for the Yankees, but he also refused to play for the Chicago club for $17,500.

The result was that the Bombers got him back on their roster after a ruling by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler. The American League pennant winners then obtained waivers on Wakefield and sent him to Oakland.

Dick recently obtained his but certainly a valuable—object lesson on just what he can expect to pay for the privilege of being a big leaguer.

It came to him earlier and more forcefully than it does to most rookies. Perhaps he will be a better man and a better ball player because it did.

Giants, Indians Still Hot, But It Should Have Rained In Other Cities

NEW YORK, April 14 — The New York Giants and Cleveland Indians, who wind up their annual Spring safari in the Polo Grounds today and tomorrow, are undoubtedly the hottest teams on the grapefruit circuit.

They wound up the more adventuresome phase of their training jaunt yesterday in Norfolk, Va., by playing to a 6 to 6 tie in a game distinguished by a fire that destroyed part of the wooden bleachers.

The fire was by far the most interesting feature of the game as Sal Maglie of the Giants and Bob Lemon of the Indians went five innings apiece tuning up for Tuesday's seasonal openers.

Two persons were injured fleeing the blaze, two others had their pockets picked, and the game was delayed for 20 minutes before firemen got things under control. Elsewhere, rain ruined the first scheduled home appearance of the Chicago White Sox and Cubs. And in Boston, New York and Philadelphia intracity rivalries produced such ragged baseball that some unkind souls said it might have been better if it had rained there, too.

Both the world and American League champion New York Yankees and the National League champion Philadelphia Phillies shuffled reverses.

Knicks Nursing Victory Hopes

NEW YORK, April 14 — The New York Knickerbockers nursed slightly reawakened hopes today in their National Basketball Association championship play-off with Rochester.

The Knicks edged the Royals, 79 to 73, last night for their first victory in four playoff games. That triumph staved off elimination in the best-of-seven series, but it looks like a short respite.

Tomorrow the series shifts back to Rochester, where the Knicks lost the first two playoff games and haven't won a contest in three years.

Cap Seeks New Football Pilot

COLUMBUS, April 14—A vacant football coaching job at Capital University has the rumor mill running fulltime today with Dave Henderson, Kenyon college mentor, as the lead candidate.

Dale Rose recently resigned the Capital coaching post to take over the athletic department at Upper Arlington high school.

Henderson has coached football at Kenyon for five years and basketball for three. His 1950 grid squad was the first Kenyon team in history to have an undefeated season.

Trotters Chalk 9th Victory

DENVER, April 14—The Harlem Globetrotters, king clowns in the cage world, played it straight in Denver last night for a 65-59 victory over the College All-Stars.

Nearly 6,000 fans witnessed the Trotters' ninth victory in 12 meetings with the All-Stars, but were disappointed that the victors were not in a capricious mood.

Don Sunderlage of Illinois, All-Star guard, was the evening's high scorer with 17 points.

Census Bureau Plans Minor Checkup In County Next Week

Up-To-Date Data Said Needed

Survey Is Tied To Defense Setup

Up-to-date figures on family characteristics, consumer income, and migration will be obtained as a result of the Census Bureau's current population survey in April, according to the district supervisor, Mrs. Helen C. Young of Chillicothe.

The current population survey is to be continued next week with a representative cross-section of 25,000 families throughout the county, including many located in Pickaway County, Mrs. Young said.

Although income information was obtained a year ago in the regular census, the change in economic conditions brought about by the outbreak of hostilities in Korea and the emergency program make it necessary to obtain current information about the distribution of the Nation's purchasing power.

The results of the April survey will show the numbers of families in each income bracket and the types of families which had increases or decreases in income between 1949 and 1950.

BUSINESSMEN and farm groups will use these figures as a guide in planning production and sales. The government will use these facts to develop price and wage policies to meet the current emergency needs.

The migration data, which will show the number of persons and families who have moved to a different place since last year, will indicate whether the defense program is increasing the mobility of the nation's workers and their families.

During World War II, an unprecedented number of men and women moved to war production centers to take jobs. The April survey will also show how many people are leaving farms to take up city residence.

These facts will be in addition to the official government figures on employment and unemployment which are provided each month by the Current Population survey.

In February, according to estimates developed from the survey, employment conditions showed little change.

Estimates at 58.9 million in February, total civilian employment was about the same as in January, but was much the highest ever recorded for that time of year. Unemployment, which usually increases slightly between January and February, instead remained relatively unchanged at a level of 2.4 million.

The survey will be conducted in Pickaway County during next week.

Bingo Operator To Be Sentenced

CLEVELAND, April 14 — Albert Langman, 52, convicted of a gambling charge in a test case in Cleveland's anti-bingo edict, will be sentenced in municipal court Wednesday.

His counsel, James Bravo, will then present arguments on motions for a new trial before Judge David C. Meek. Langman was convicted yesterday of unlawfully keeping rooms for gambling.

Langman's arrest March 29 set up a court test of Mayor Thomas A. Burke's anti-bingo edict. The mayor had ordered bingo games shut down following an Ohio supreme court decision which held the city's bingo licensing law unconstitutional.

Bravo contends bingo is a lottery and does not come under the gambling law by which Langman was charged.

British Seize Golden Goose

HONG KONG, April 14—Revenue officers in the British crown colony of Hong Kong reported today seizure of a goose stuffed with gold.

Although the live bird had produced no golden eggs, the officers discovered that someone had forced smuggled gold down the gullet of the goose.

The goose was taken from six Chinese coolie women who had arrived in Hong Kong from the port of Macao.

Deadly Poison May Bring Aid In Heart Disease

CLEVELAND, April 14 — Chemists on the trail of a deadly poison contained in the fruit of the Japanese Star Anise have isolated a substance which may prove valuable as a heart stimulant.

The substance, called anisatin, was described today at the 119th national meeting of the American Chemical Society in Cleveland in a report by four professors of Rutgers university.

The professors, John F. Lane, Norma S. Leeds, Walter T. Koch and George Gorin, said it has been known since ancient times that the fruit of the anise contained a convulsive agent.

The paper stated that numerous attempts to isolate the active ingredient have been made without success for 70 years.

"While it is yet too early to report anything concerning its pharmacological importance," the chemists continued, "the similarity of its physiological action to that of the anesthetic drugs strychnine, metrazol and picrotoxin, suggest that it may have useful therapeutic application as a stimulant."

Dr. Jean Dufrenoy and three associates of the university of California reported that the indiscriminate use of 2,4-D can have disastrous effects on crops. "So potent is 2,4-D that this and other similar chemical compounds are considered to be potential weapons which might be used in biological warfare to destroy an enemy's crops," the report added.

The chemists discovered that addition of potassium nitrate to 2,4-D counteracts effects of overdoses and in some cases actually promotes growth.

Peron Government To Take Paper

BUENOS AIRES, April 14 — The Argentine congress sent to President Juan D. Peron today a measure calling for expropriation of the throttled independent newspaper La Prensa.

The All-Peronista senate voted 22 to 0 last night in favor of the expropriation already approved by the chamber of deputies.

The newspaper, largest Spanish language daily in the world which long had been critical of Peron, was put out of circulation on Jan. 26 when the pro-government news vendors' union went on strike.

Ethiopians To Get U.S. Army Food

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., April 14 — Ethiopian troops now enroute to Korea have been given special dispensation by the Coptic Christian church so they may eat U.S. army rations.

United Nations officials said the Ethiopian contingent numbers about 700 men. They added that the Coptic Christian faith enjoins a diet similar to that of orthodox Jews.

Dehydrator Chiefs Hold Annual Meet

Sixth annual meeting of the stockholders of Pickaway Dehydrating Cooperative, Inc., was held Thursday night in the Ashville Knights of Pythias lodge hall with A. Ray Plum presiding.

George Coon, secretary of the cooperative, read the report of the 1950 annual meeting and also presented the auditor's report for the term from Nov. 1, 1950, to March 31, 1951.

Jack Dewey, manager of the dehydrator, reported on the progress of the company and stated that he was building an automatic feeder which will eliminate the need for one and sometimes two employees. He also stated that during the last season over 1000 tons of alfalfa meal were processed, a gain of some 300 tons over the preceding year. Approximately one ton of meal can be made from three tons of green alfalfa.

The rapid change from raw, green alfalfa hay into dry alfalfa meal is almost unbelievable to the uninitiated. The hay is cut, raked into winrows immediately, chopped into short pieces, elevated into waiting trucks, and whirled away to the dehydrator where it is fed into a large, heated drum from which it emerges within a few minutes with practically all of the moisture "dried" out. It is ground and put into bags ready to be sold to commercial feed companies or farmers.

The price of the meal varies according to its protein content, greenness and other factors, but the 1950 output averaged $55 per ton.

Three fulltime employees now service the plant the year round while several extra helpers are employed during the summer.

Alva May of the nominating committee presented a list of six from whom three were elected to serve as directors for a three-year term. Those elected were all incumbents and were John

U.S. Food Averts Yugoslav Famine

WASHINGTON, April 14—The American agricultural attaché at Belgrade said today that U.S. food has successfully averted famine in drought-ridden Yugoslavia.

Attache John J. Haggerty, in a report to the agriculture department, said that the mere announcement "throughout the land, that the U.S. had promised aid" accomplished a primary objective and has "confirmed the sense of security up to the present time when supplies are visibly adequate."

Haggerty said that more than 500,000 tons of U.S. food and feed are pouring into Yugoslavia in a steady stream. This food, he said, is enough to provide every man, woman and child in Yugoslavia with 70 pounds of food.

In Arizona, 43 percent of all traffic accidents occur at night.

Slayer Granted Execution Stay

COLUMBUS, April 14—James C. Edwards, 29-year-old convict-slayer of Mrs. Helena Tona of Canton, has been granted an indefinite stay of execution by the Ohio supreme court.

Edwards, who was scheduled to be executed April 20 in Ohio Penitentiary, was convicted Nov. 6 and an appellate court upheld the conviction.
